He was enabled to do this because he had an absolute right, not only to the sovereignty and independence of the country, but to all the powers and authorities that are incident to the sovereignty of a nation. He was a governing person, but he was also a representative of the people. What this implies is that even if the people were to want to be represented by their own government, they still have the right to do so. You can either have a democracy or you can have a theocracy. A democracy is a system whereby the voters are empowered to choose their governing person. A theocracy is a system whereby the governing person is chosen by God. In a democracy, the people collectively choose their leader, whether he or she is a man or woman. In a theocracy, the people choose their leader based on religious considerations. A democracy, therefore, allows the people to vote for a governing person. A theocracy prohibits voting for anyone. A democracy allows people to choose their government. A theocracy prohibits people from choosing their government. The two systems are mutually exclusive. A democracy is a form of government where people collectively choose their governing person. A theocracy is a form of of
