Posts Tagged 'Ronald Reagan' MEXICO CITY — A new report is revealing how the "one percent" got even richer in Mexico. It's not the world's most organized financial crime group, nor a loose collection of amoral grifters and corrupt cops. Just days ago, the Office of the National Statistics and Geography (ONEF) released a report based on data provided by the Banco Nacional de Oro, or BANA. According to data collected from the BANA, the annual income of Mexicans in 2011 reached an all-time high of $1.7 trillion. The report doesn't list a particular economic sector as being the driving force behind the increase, although higher prices for imports from the United States have contributed to a rise in the price of goods sold in Mexico. The report was released on Tuesday, December 1, the same day that news broke of a mid-term poll that showed that a majority of Mexicans believe the country needs changes in order to stop corruption, crime and inequality. The phrase "Hola America" has never been more appropriate. According to a new report, the American dream in Mexico is crumbling before our very eyes. Before his death in 2009, longtime Los Angeles Times columnist Ruben Salazar, the dean of Mexican-American journalism, published a column every week
