The player assumes the role of a dangerous and powerful girl known as SCP-029. After a facility wide power outage occurs, numerous SCPs breach containment and proceed to wreak havoc throughout the facility. SCP-029 must use her mind-controlling powers to survive and find a way to escape from the facility. A player assumes the role of Scott, a recent college graduate working on a summer internship in the Foundation's Regional Office. He is given a brief about Project Athena, a top-secret project run by Aubrey Klein, the Regional Director. While on his first night at work, an unusual incident causes containment breach. This leads to the release of one hundred nine (109) SCPs, nine of which are Class 1. Immediately, the containment staff enforces the local lockdown and attempts to cease the spread of the SCPs, which are all exhibiting unpredictable and aggressive behavior. While this is occurring, Scott finds a tool kit that was left behind by the operative sent to investigate the event. With this, he can easily make his way to the study room's door and escape out of the building. As Scott makes his way out of the building, he is caught off-guard by the sight of SCP-██████. This specter is a humanoid manifestation of loneliness and sadness, and will attack its host at any opportunity. As SCP-██████'s body causes him to act erratically, he is left vulnerable to attack. Scott has a choice to either toss the tool kit and make quick work of this monster or use his staff to immobilize it and prevent it from attacking. If he decides to escape, he can traverse across the top of the facility and continue forward, but this does not seem to be the safest option. As it becomes increasingly clear that SCP-██████ cannot be stopped, the containment staff focuses their attention on stopping the other SCPs, including SCP-106, in order to contain the effects of this breach. Once everyone is out of the building, Scott makes his way toward an exit and the relative safety of the nearby city, as this is the only exit that is not locked down. As the name implies, this game has a ghost story-esque vibe to it. It is very low-key and not overly scary, with the main challenge being how the player takes down the ghosts. You are tasked with shooting them from a first person perspective, and it is up to you how you take them down. There are three types

Podcast Part 3! Check them out on iTunes, Spotify or wherever you're supposed to listen to podcasts. Episode 38: I Know How To Spell Shitbackwards, Don't Tell Me Again I know, we've talked about teething problems, themes and boring shit that's happened over the last twelve episode, but here's some real shit for your plastic sponge brains, trust me! In Episode 37 we expand upon the theme of class based questions and answer the age old individual vs them based; Why are the Eugenacists better than the Rigorist factions? We also talk about Dragon's Egg, have a looks at Season 2 and round up a couple of our personal holds. Episode 37 was recorded on TGS's headphones at the Lighthouse in Brighton, just as the Labour Leadership debate was taking place. Unfortunately we had to cut out the end while some lady with her phone was using the bass drum to transform her into a human cymbal. Addition: Recording final part of this podcast over summer has come just as the world is understandably covered in a shitstorm of Olympic fortnight. No disrespect to Russia, In advance for accommodating corporate interest and error, I tipped my nub in the direction of a decision with multi platform games love.
