By implementing the motion capture data from the whole team in game, players will be able to better understand their teammates' movements and anticipate their opponent's moves, thus giving them more opportunities to score off of a kick or intercept a pass with a through-ball. Thanks to HyperMotion Technology, players will also have less reaction time to the key moments of the match as they receive the ball in their back pocket. Player Faces In FIFA 20, the face of each player had a minimum height of the rendering of their head, which came to a point just above the player's shirt collar. In FIFA 22, player faces are now more expressive, with motions similar to what is seen in real life. Players also have more facial hair; the player's beard and mustache are dynamic and will grow differently based on their face expression. Players can now contract facial muscle and cause a full smile or frown through their actions. Face and Body Animation FIFA games have included basic body and facial animations since the first game was released in 1996. In FIFA 22, players have more animations to help reflect how they look and feel in the real world. New Player Traits FIFA 22 introduces a new set of player traits that will set the players apart from their real-life counterparts. These traits will be showcased in the animated visual highlights of matches and on the player faces of the players in the highlights. Additionally, players will now be able to earn these traits at the end of a match if they play through the full match with the same team and aim for the highest available score. The traits are called "Direct Strike," "No Chance," "Dominant Finish" and "Best In Class." For example, "Dominant Finish" is a trait that signifies a player who is a goal threat from open play or from through-balls on goal. This trait won't be displayed on a player's face or in a match highlight if the game ends before the player completes the match. However, if a player plays through the full match, he will earn a visual highlight that features his play style and traits of "Dominant Finish." New Attacking Play Types Before FIFA 22, players in possession were only able to pass to a teammate in the final stages of the attack, which could result in a finished

Read MoreSunday, November 1, 2013 Netherrealm and Waypoint's coverage of the New York City Comicon 2013 will probably provide you with a blast from the past of what the convention was like back in the old times. Having been a guest in the past, it's a blast and I can't wait to go next year. Tons of crazy cosplay, great sights, a couple of not so great panels, tons of awesome indie comics and a couple of panels with actors in hand. Always a fun day! Thursday, October 24, 2013 Having heard rumors about Alien: Isolation, I decided to go ahead and get the game. I love sci-fi games and I felt a strong inclination to play this one. I've read quite a bit on this game and was expecting a game that would be like the Metroid series with like, guns and lasers and stuff. This was not the case. It was more like Tomb Raider, only much much scarier. From all the previews I saw, this game looked great. A real dark and scary game that you'll feel in your spines. The game play looks great. Loved the short demo I was able to play. I can't wait for the game to be released. I have a feeling this will be a good addition to my collection. As usual, the E3 event for the last few years, have been packed full of awesome games that are on the way. The first three years of E3 have been great, yet this year there are a whole bunch of great games that I'm looking forward to. Thursday, October 17, 2013 Often times, I notice some panel and the speaker list that just sends me back to a certain game from the past. This is one of those times. Nintendo announced a new game called Nintendo Entertainment System: The Game Station and it is sure to be a blast from the past for fans of the Nintendo Entertainment System.
