FIFA 22 developers have described this technology, which is live right now, as “real-time animation.” Players may feel more responsive and fluid on-ball, making it possible to dodge tackles, make smart decisions with the ball, and create spectacular goals. This includes true-to-life and variable acceleration of the ball, enhanced collision physics, dribble turns, and more realistic body positions and movement. Additionally, dynamic weather and time of day will alter the gameplay experience. FIFA 22 uses a fully customizable lighting system (with over 50 lighting effects), so games can look and feel very different at different times of day. Dynamic weather gives even more variety and visual impact to the experience, including more intuitive surface vision to further enhance the realistic experience.

Real-time Artificial Intelligence FIFA 22 uses AI Vision, a new AI Intelligence system that uses vision data to automate the simulation of multiple factors including the vision of all players on the pitch and the surrounding environment. This system interacts with on-pitch player intelligence and creates more realistic situations that are more human. AI Vision will be further developed in future updates and FIFA 22 serves as the starting point for the future development of this technology. FIFA 22's AI Vision uses its Vision Computer to create the sense that teams are made of individual humans. New Broadcast View FIFA 22 introduces improved ways to get play ready from both the Broadcast and Interactive Team View settings, giving players the ability to focus more on their favorite team. The Interactive Team View now uses real-time view data from the broadcast camera and allows teams to be instantly notified when their AI Defenders are aligned and in position. When the player is in real time play mode, they can get the play ready in the Interactive Team View. The Broadcast View allows teams to be setup and ready for actual play in less than 10 seconds. The Broadcast View also features new technology that can accurately capture the position of free kicks. Q: Are there issues with upgrading from Windows XP to Windows 7 I am planning on upgrading my home system from Windows XP to Windows 7. I have homegroup set up, and will be using the wireless printer connected to this system. The software I have installed is all Windows Media Center related. Is there anything I should be worried about during the process of upgrading from XP? A: Depends on what is currently installed. For example, I just upgraded to Windows 7 on a laptop with a horrible Wi-Fi card. In the process I installed a new version of the WiFi card drivers. That didn't work; the Wi-Fi card wouldn't work because Windows 7 had a different.inf file. The only things I recall having issues with are the antivirus product. Norton AntiVirus was a bit cranky because it had just been uninstalled. It insisted on reinstalling itself and wouldn't let me use Windows to do it. I had to perform a full system restore to fix it. Other than that, the upgrade was a piece of cake. Michael D. Clark, JD, MA, CLC is the president of The American College of Health Care Administrators.
