odenomembranous ventricular septal defects and right aortic arch is reported to be associated with increased morbidity and mortality for echocardiography performed in the neonatal period.\[[@ref1][@ref2]\] Moreover, congenital heart disease with hemodynamic significance should be diagnosed, especially in the neonatal period, before the age of 1 month, when the neonatal circulation has not yet been well established. It is, therefore, vital to have a high index of suspicion for aortic arch anomalies in cases of heart disease presenting in infancy. A careful search for dysmorphic features, which may include a broad forehead, arched eyebrows, hypertelorism, a long philtrum, and short, cone-shaped ears, can assist in early identification of an aortic arch anomaly in a patient with a normal fetal echocardiogram.\[[@ref3]\] Our patient had a long narrow nose, broad forehead, hypertelorism, flat shaped lower lip, and micrognathia. Abnormalities in neurodevelopmental milestones may suggest neurodevelopmental delay or mental disability. Neonatal period may be an ideal time for detection of congenital heart disease, especially when malformations are detected during regular visits and periodic follow-ups. The MRI in our patient showed complete absence of the aortic arch, with the abnormal narrowing of the isthmus, which resembles a neopulmonary vascular ring, which is commonly detected in Hirschsprung's disease. This, in turn, may be a cause of tracheobronchomalacia. However, in our case, the development of tracheobronchomalacia was preceded by the neonatal respiratory failure. Thus, a thorough workup is mandatory for patients with early-onset respiratory failure in order to allow comprehensive assessment of associated congenital heart disease and aortic arch anomalies. Declaration of patient consent {#sec2-1} ------------------------------- The authors certify that they have obtained all appropriate patient consent forms. In the form the patient(s) has/have given his/her/their consent for his/her/their images and other clinical information to be reported in the journal. right." RICHARD: "Wow." DAVID: "No, not worth a trip. What do you want?" RICHARD: "Let's go to a restaurant that doesn't have a $20 minimum." DAVID: "Okay." But, really, no one seems to know what restaurant it is I am talking about. It is, in fact, a pretty well-known restaurant—one with a $30-a-person minimum—as is almost every restaurant that has bison. RICHARD: "Huh?" DAVID: "Nothing." RICHARD: "Oh. Okay." It was also one of the most expensive restaurants I had ever been to, according to Consumer Reports—a $11 porterhouse steak. We were, by the time we left, about $60 in. RICHARD: "I guess I'll just have to find somewhere else." DAVID: "We're trying to not go to those kind of places anymore." RICHARD: "Okay. What do you want?" DAVID: "Well, I want a place where I can have vegetables." I was seriously considering asking for mashed potatoes. As I was fumbling with my pockets for some change, Richard noticed that I still had it. "Oh, you must have a restaurant," I said. "What one?" RICHARD: "Oh, a lot of

SATURDAY, MAY 4 RICHARD: "Do you think I'll make it?" DAVID: "What?" RICHARD: "Make it
