I can mock out the Address class using EasyMock, however, I can't create mock objects of a class that is constructed from user defined classes. Am I right in thinking it's not possible to mock out a class that is defined using new? A: It is possible but you should generally avoid it. Don't write code that relies on types that way. It's generally a bad idea, and there are often solutions that don't involve mocking the type to be created. For example, you could call your Service with a string argument, and give it a factory that creates the type instead. (This does have the disadvantage of requiring you to modify the code in some other places, but it often works best.) 0cc13bf012
