Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a laser annealing apparatus and, more specifically, to a laser annealing apparatus for annealing a semiconductor film subjected to irradiation of light from an excimer laser, an emission-wavelength-variable excimer laser, etc. (hereinafter referred to as "the semiconductor film"). The present invention also relates to a method for producing a semiconductor device employing such a laser annealing apparatus. 2. Description of the Prior Art As the degree of integration of semiconductor integrated circuits increases, the wiring width of transistor gate electrodes has come to be reduced. The wiring width is even reduced to a level of 1.mu.m or less in the future. With such a decrease in the gate wiring width, it is anticipated that the gate length will also be decreased. However, when the gate length is decreased to 1.mu.m or less, the resistance of the gate electrode is increased, and the operation speed of the transistor is decreased. In order to reduce the resistance of the gate electrode, impurities should be introduced to the channel region, whereby the threshold voltage becomes excessively high, and the operating speed is further decreased. The degree to which this problem can be solved will depend on the quality of the gate insulating film. As a material of the gate insulating film, it has been found effective to use an oxide film of a porous structure in order to increase the perm
