Mast cell proteases attenuate endothelial cell migration and proliferation. Mast cells are thought to play a critical role in the development of atherosclerotic plaque, but the mechanisms involved remain poorly understood. In this study we investigated the effect of mast cell proteases on endothelial cell (EC) functions relevant to atherogenesis. The number of EC migrated through a Matrigel-coated collagen I gel was decreased by approximately 25% by co-incubation with recombinant mouse tryptase (RMtS). RMtS also dose-dependently attenuated the proliferative response of EC to vascular endothelial growth factor (VEGF) and serum. The decrease in proliferation was likely due to a specific interaction between Mts and VEGF, as the inhibitory effect of RMtS was reversed by incubation with a recombinant form of RMtS that lacked the catalytic site for VEGF. The migration and proliferation of human EC were similarly affected by co-incubation with human tryptase (HT). Similarly, cell migration and proliferation of human EC were inhibited by co-incubation with lung mast cell proteinase (MCP). These data provide the first evidence that mast cell proteases inhibit the migration and proliferation of EC and suggest that these inhibitory effects may contribute to the atheroprotective effects of mast cells. Antiplatelet therapy for secondary stroke prevention in patients with atrial fibrillation. Atrial fibrillation (AF) is the most common cardiac arrhythmia and is associated with increased morbidity and mortality. Stroke is the most important morbidity associated with AF. Stroke prevention in AF requires a multifaceted approach. Antithrombotic therapy is important for secondary stroke prevention in patients with AF. Aspirin, warfarin and heparin exert their effects through different mechanisms, but clinical trials that assessed antiplatelet therapy for secondary stroke prevention in AF have consistently shown the efficacy of aspirin for reducing the risk of stroke. Although the risk of intracerebral hemorrhage with aspirin is high, the benefit of aspirin in preventing ischemic stroke outweighs the risk of hemorrhagic stroke. The risk of hemorrhagic stroke with warfarin and the lack of consistent benefit with aspirin for secondary stroke prevention in AF mean that warfarin is the treatment of choice for patients with AF who have other risk factors, or who have severe AF and cannot use aspirin. Newer oral anticoagulants are

Investigation of utility of FT-Raman spectroscopy in the diagnosis of dental caries. To evaluate the efficacy of FT-Raman spectroscopy in the detection of caries, an investigation of the possibility of using FT-Raman spectroscopy to detect caries disease and exfoliate carious tissue was performed using an in vitro caries model. These experiments were performed on three different substrates: enamel, dentin and artificial root dentin. The spectra from carious and sound substrates were examined and compared with the Raman spectra of laser-induced fluorescence (LIF). FT-Raman spectra of resin-based composites were used to demonstrate the potential for identifying clinically deep carious lesions and the ability to distinguish between freshly erupted, non-pulpal areas and carious areas. Although the in vitro caries model was not designed to simulate the clinical condition, the results of this study suggest that FT-Raman spectroscopy may be used to discriminate between sound and carious tissue in teeth that have been partially demineralised but have not reached the pulp. Photos from the 2012 District Band Association Convention "Convention" is a word that doesn't do justice to the 2012 District Band Association Convention held in Kerrville, Texas. As we sat down to eat dinner in the pavilion, we immediately noticed the piles of beautifully folded band programs strewn around the room. Instead of forming in piles, the programs were distributed around the room so that even those who were standing were able to see them. There were no piles. Instead, the reader was able to quickly access the program of any band that might be playing. And it looked like a band was playing somewhere near us. We didn't know it then, but it was the Cross Band, who were just finishing up their set at "Lunar Concert" in the lobby. It was a perfect time for a picture. Although we had not seen the Cross Band when we had our picture taken, we would later see them perform when we attended the State Convention later in the week, which was held at Camp Warriner in San Angelo, Texas. The annual State Convention kicked off with a breakfast that featured a welcome from Warriner Director, Richard Warriner, as well as Chris Weaver from the Texas Bandmasters Association. An exhibitor's booth featured information on all the new products and services that
