with the release of fraps version 4.5.0 and below, the program will not be compatible with windows xp and windows 7. this will mean that you will be unable to play back recorded files on those machines, or use the menu options to start recording. this is a result of the developers discontinuing support for windows 7 and windows xp. this is a problem for many people as there are many windows xp and windows 7 machines still in use, and the support for the old operating systems was to be extended until at least the end of 2015. however, the fraps team have decided to remove support for windows xp and windows 7 in a couple of weeks time, on september 19th, 2015. if you have one of these machines, you need to update your version of fraps now, or the program will not work properly. fraps is an extremely lightweight application and can be used to capture screenshots without causing the game to pause. however, for many of the games released today, fraps will generate a file of large size. this can cause problems if you arent using the program for capturing game footage. fraps is not a low-level recording program, so if you want to see the frame rate of your game while recording, youll need to download a third party application such as fraps, frapswatch or the fraps developer toolkit. all of these programs will give you a graph with a frame rate on the x-axis and a time in milliseconds on the y-axis. you can find the frame rate at any time by clicking the graph. when using fraps, you can launch it from the start menu or directly from the desktop. if the program doesnt start, click the start button in the bottom left of your screen and then click the fraps icon in the start menu.

Fraps is pretty good for simple video recording and logging. For more advanced use, it still has the potential, and this tutorial covers that. The recorded footage can be edited and trimmed, and your Fraps log file can then be logged in Fraps, converted and then exported to a video format of your choice. Some of the features may not work properly with current hardware and drivers. Therefore, FRAPS cannot guarantee any compatibility in the following case: Running a game with a 3D accelerator, and not using a V-sync of your VGA driver The third-party drivers dont properly emulate 3D scanlines. The application will be blocked from recording content by some antivirus software. Nvidia has also released a software update for the Unreal Engine 4 which provides a hardware accelerated video recorder for Fraps, which doesn't require a Performance Monitoring Mode in Windows. The Fraps update also adds an option to increase the recording quality in Fraps. The program is dependent on Microsoft's DWMAPI provided by Windows. It will work correctly if the kernel-mode DWM filter (WDMFILTER.SYS) is installed in the system. (It can be located in the system32 and system folders respectively.) Note: The version of DWMAPI used by Fraps is only compatible with Windows 7 and later. Windows Vista and prior systems will require an update or a system recompilation using this file. Windows 8 and above systems should be able to use Windows 8 ComTools to check the available APIs and determine which version of DWMAPI is installed. 5ec8ef588b
