with the collection, zara studio is encouraging us to take a walk in both cities. "walking is a great way to connect with your surroundings, because you can see all the details of the city that a car doesn't show you," she says. it's also a good way to get some fresh air: "nowadays, people are so wrapped up in their mobile phones that they don't even notice when the air is becoming polluted. and if you're looking for a little more than just a maxi dress, zara studio has plenty of inspiration for you, too. the collection includes a large number of interesting prints, including many that incorporate embroidery and different kinds of embellishment. doing the rounds of the showroom, i was struck by how much zara's new collection shares with its other collections, most of which are made with the same inspirational sources. but there's a difference. this time, it's the french label's collection that shows its face. the new arrival is in-keeping with the attitude of the hotel zara in sentosa, whose grounds are home to a zen garden, the sculpture garden and the zara studio heritage park, whose collection is dedicated to bringing the magic of the japanese samurai into the digital age. the new offering is inspired by everything from the latest surf and music trends to the hottest new products on the market, and the range, which has arrived just in time for this summer, is a seasonal-yet-modern variation of the existing zara studio line. accentuating the trendy pieces, zaras new collection includes a few new additions to the womenswear and menswear ranges, such as a slip-on sneaker and mens shirt, as well as new accessories like a new backpack and beach bag.
