Over the course of its history, Raspberry Pi has received some amazing support from makers, artists, educators, developers, hobbyists, and tinkerers around the world. As the Raspberry Pi Board came to an end in 2014, the team behind the Foundation is exploring how to take the concept of making fun, accessible computing accessible to the next generation of tech enthusiasts. One of the ways we plan to do this is through the Raspberry Pi Zero. This new device promises to be even more powerful than the original while costing only $5! We want as many people as possible to be able to buy the new Raspberry Pi Zero and have a fun and memorable experience with it. In order to do that, we need your support. The $5 price point means we need to raise about $300,000 in cash and in-kind donations to make a Raspberry Pi Zero education kit available to schools and creators. The kit will cost at least $50, and is built with the intention that it be a gift
